friendly representation to Provisional President Huerta.

The French government declares itself convinced by advices from Washington of the sincerity of the peaceful intentions of the United States government to the Mexican people. It is also indicated that President Poincaré will not receive Francisco De La Barra who was recently appointed Mexican minister to France and who arrived in Paris on Saturday night. He pointed out that although France recognized Mexico as provisional president, the French foreign office did not feel itself bound to receive his envoy although this has not been settled definitely. It is understood that Sr. Francisco De La Barra will go to Rome before presenting his letters of credence and President Poincaré who is at present on his vacation in the country, will not return until September 17th.

Schmedemann, who has been chosen as minister to Norway. The date of the banquet has not been determined, but it will be held the latter part of the week. Former Attorney General Frank L. FRANK L. STEVENS FINED FOR ASSAULT*Plead Guilty to Charge Before Judge Field This Morning—May Face A Civil Action.

Frank L. Stevens pleaded guilty in municipal court this morning to making an assault upon Morris Lewis, and at the request of John L. Fisher, counsel for the defendant, was fined $1 and costs amounting in all to $5.25. The judge heard none of the facts in the case as Mr. Stevens pleaded guilty without any testimony being taken. Mr. Lewis announced later this morning that he would proceed through his attorney to bring a civil action for damages against Mr. Stevens.

The assault to which Mr. Stevens plead guilty was made on August 5. According to the story told by Mr. Lewis they had a dispute over a lease on the afternoon of that day. When Mr. Lewis left to go up to the rooms he occupied on the second floor of 105 East Milwaukee street, Mr. Stevens followed him and it is alleged broke the pane of the glass door opening into the office, forced the door open, and it is alleged struck him three times. Mr. Stevens was represented in court by Attorney M. O. Mouat.

SHERIFF WHIPPLE FINDS EMPLOYMENT FOR MEN COMMITTED*Four Prisoners Sent to Jail Under New Law Are Given Jobs This Morning—One to Serve Year Term.

Although Sheriff C. S. Whipple does not approve of every feature of the new law compelling the employment of prisoners sentenced to the Rock County jail for the term, he received a number of men who neither desire work nor are desirable to employers. He has been most successful in finding positions for those who have been committed under the law thus far.

Four men just beginning terms at the jail were put at work this morning. Among the number was Joseph Jordan of Beloit, who was sentenced to the jail for a year on the charge of wife desertion who went to work at seven o'clock this morning at the Fairbanks-Morse plant in Beloit at a wage of $3 per day. This money will all be turned over to Sheriff Whipple and will be given over to Jordan's wife and a three year old child whom Sherbrooke, Aug. 25.—Thaw had a fairly restful night. He is fortunate as are all of those who rest here after his dentition of having cool, clear, invigorating weather. He has taken no exercise unless the nervous pacing of his cell could be called exercising.

His personal appearance is far from being the neat young man he appeared in the New York courtroom. He was always spruced up there at the coaching of counsel, but in his Sherbrooke cell he looks unkempt.

Jail Delivery Reported.

A wild rumor floated around Sherbrooke before dawn that the oft talked of jail delivery had been carried out and that Thaw was again speeding away in the night in an auto. It was the noise made by a powerful car of a local physician who happened to

SERIOUS CHARGE IS PREFERRED AGAINST ALLEGED BIGAMIST*JOHN JONES ALIAS EDMUND OWENS, FORMER JANESVILLE MAN, UNDER ARREST AT BELOIT.*WAS TWICE MARRIED*First Wife and Baby Live in Janesville, Married Second Last Thursday in Rockford.

John Jones, alias Edmund Owens, former employee of the Airdome theater in this city, who has worked for the St. Paul road as switchman and for Knudson the sign painter, painting the electric sign post in the city and later moved to Beloit was taken into court at Beloit this afternoon charged with violation of section 481B of the revised statutes and his hearing set for Wednesday, August 27th, upon his request for a preliminary examination.

Has Wife Here.

It would appear that Jones, or Owen, is in a serious predicament. He had admitted that he married Miss Alice Dinnphy of this city last January at Waupkesha, his home, and that she has since taken the trouble to secure a divorce. That his wife and baby live with her parents at 378 Milton avenue and at the same time last year he eloped to Rockford with Catherine McGavock, daughter of William McGavock, a prominent Beloit contractor, was married there and later with the McGavock girl, who is but seventeen, went to Elgin, where he was arrested Saturday morning on complaint of his latest victim.

Is Through With Him.

At the Dunphy home this afternoon it was noted that his first wife is through with him. That if she could she would not even appear in court against him, except to prove her marriage, which she has papers to do. She was married to Jones at Waupkesha last January, his mother evidently tired of living here and moved to Beloit where he met the McGavock girl, who attended a business college near the Grand theatre, which he was conducting.

Offers Plea.

In the Beloit court this afternoon Jones admitted his first marriage and also indicated through his attorney C. D. Rosa, that he would plead guilty to the charge of adultery, which has a smaller sentence than the charge preferred against him, but this District Attorney Dunwiddie refused to accept. The charge made is under the state statute and is similar to the Mann White Slave Act. If he is convicted in the Wisconsin court he can later be arrested and convicted under the Illinois laws for bigamy if two marriages are proven.

BELIEVE DEAD MAN HAS BROTHER HERE*Police Searching for Relatives of John Tracy, Found Dead in Oil Barn Near Waupakee.

Search for the relatives of John Tracy, who was found dead in a barn in the town of Wespert, near Waupakee, Dane county, is being made by the police of this city in response to a telephone message from Waupakee received this morning. The police have not been able to obtain any further description of the man than that he was a farm hand about forty years old and that he was for many years at the vicinity for the last three or four years. At the time of his death, the cause of which as not been learned, he was working on the farm of David Lease. It was reported that he had brothers in or near Janesville.

MRS. WORRY. WHY IS IT VACATIONS DON'T HELP ANY?

SPORT Snap-Shots.

The spectacle of a baseball player wearing glasses while off the field is about as rare as the sight of a pugilist going around on crutches. Of course, a beaming sun occasionally makes it necessary for an outfielder to wear smoked glasses so he can take care of the high flies but, he gets rid of them the minute he gets off the field. There is one player in the big leagues, however, who wears glasses while off the field. His name is Harry Hooper and he plays with the Boston Red Sox. When Hooper first joined the Boston club he discarded his glasses, as he feared if it became known he wore them it would work against his chances of getting a regular job. But soon the violent headaches which first caused him to wear specs returned and his life became a burden. So disregarding the taunts of his teammates, Hooper returned to the glasses, and he's been wearing 'em ever since. ***

Here's a new name among fighters that you might as well try and remember—Frankie Izzo. Izzo is a little Italian boy of Chicago and he threatens to become one of the leading boxing figures of the middle west during the coming winter. He weighs only 195 pounds, and they say he can make 103 with ease. This class used to be called bantam weight, but the bantams of late years have been getting bigger and now you have to weigh 105 to get into that class. But Izzo threatens to change things. Whenever a star as bright as he undoubtedly arises in the sporting firmament it is the special aim of everybody else to try and get him whipped. ***

If anybody thinks that managers and owners of baseball teams have all the wisdom there is, just let him look at some of the deals said managers and owners have put across in the past—look at them in the light of subsequent events. It was only a few seasons back that Chicago gave First Baseman Luderus and

FIFTH INNING RALLY WINS FOR WHITE SOX

Whitford Pitches Good Ball and Laughs Way Through Beloit Sluggers and Wins 8 to 6.

Healthy slugging in the fifth inning was the cause of the White Sox winning the Beloit Athletics Sunday afternoon at Yost Park, the vital statistics being eight to six. The Beloit team gave up a son a trimming three weeks ago and the locals were out for revenge and got it. Whitford of Edgerton was on the slab for the Sox and steamed the ball across with such a zest that the majority of the Beloiters just had a faint glimpse of the ball at it sailed past.

In the first session Beloit pushed a score across helped by two boots by the Sox infield, while the southpaw twirler for Beloit set the locals down in a row. Beloit put two more markers around the circuit in the fifth, while the Sox had everything coming their own way before the Sox began to wake up. In their half of the fifth round the Sox began to inhabit the sacks and pounding the floated of the port side hurler in a shameful manner. Hits by Britt, Whitford and Wills and the Beloit second baseman losing a ground ball beneath his feet, scored tour runs for the Janesville team and they threatened to make it more but a sparkling circus catch by the Beloit outfields stopped their rally.

With a one run lead as a source of playing "pep" the Sox tightened up and up to final round had a monopoly on the run column. Both teams scored marks in the ninth Beloit getting two, the Sox pushing their grand total up to eight.

Box Lineup—Whitford, p.; Wills, ss.; Stickney and Porter, fielders.

LUNDGREN PITCHING FOR ROCKFORD HURLS BUT SEVENTY BALLS

Cardinals Gather Four Hits in Lucky Seventh, and Spill Chances for No-Hit Game—Crandall Whiffs 14.

In the best game of the season played at the Driving Park yesterday afternoon, the Janesville Cardinals got to Lundgren Rockford pitcher in the lucky seventh for four hits, and the running thereby cutting the game in fine style. The score stood four to one at the end of the combat, and for a while it looked like Rockford's game. Crandall started the game and was wild, placing the ball almost anywhere but right over the plate. He settled down to business and by the time the game was over, he had easily redeemed himself, by striking out fourteen, and allowing but six hits.

Lundgren was in superb form, and up the seventh, the Cards had failed to register a hit, and not a man reached first base. On the other hand Rockford would hit and then Crandall would get the next three batters down on strikes. Rockford secured their run in the fifth when Crandall was just getting nicely started. Two singles gave the trick, and there were many gloomy faces in the grandstand until the locals turned the trick.

Rockford's pitcher established a record which may stand for some time.

During the eight innings he was pitching against the Cards, he delivered but 70 balls to the catcher. That is a feat to accomplish.

Mathewson threw but seventy-four in nine innings in a recent game.

The first six innings were interesting in a way, but again very tedious. We refer to the seventh inning, which did the business. Ryan led the round but a grounder to third hit him out at first, Nelson to Carlson. Sullivan saved the day. He hit the ball, which resulted in a bunt. No one could see the sphere, as it was hid close to the plate, as Sullivan tore to first. It was a hit. Porter sent a speedy drive into the left garden placing Sullivan on third. Butters realized what was at stake, and his head proved too much for the Forest City nine. He landed on a speedy straight line, and sent it to the center fielder as long as he could. Porter scored Sullivan. Nehr was up. He hit into center, scoring Porter. Butters was safe for the fourth drive this inning, scoring Nehr, who tore around three bags scoring safely for the third run.

Wilson hit. Two sacrifice flies by Ryan and Sullivan scored Wilson ending the game.

The latest baseball rumor in St.

Louis is that George Stovall will be asked to retire soon as manager of the Browns, and that Roger Bresnahan will take his place. Bresnahan is of little use to the Chicago Cubs, but it is generally agreed that he would be a valuable man for the Browns, as he knows the baseball game and is immensely popular in St. Louis.

CRAWFORD KEEPS ON PELTING THE PILL

Sam Crawford.

Old Sam Crawford of the Detroit Tigers is maintaining the reputation he won years ago as one of the best hitters in the American league. Rarely has his average ever gone below .300 and this season it has clung around .320. Last year his batting average for the season was .325.

A few raw decisions in the sixth inning brought forth many mocking cheers from the crowd, but it is better that everybody forgot these little mistakes, and remembered that it was not anyone of you that was uniring Belvidere next Sunday. Tiffie vs. Butters. Score? That tells the story. The game will be played at Belvidere.

MISPLACED SYMPATHY.

Since his dramatic dash for liberty from the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane, Harry Thaw has been the object of a much larger measure of public sympathy than is usually accorded to the escaped inmates of such institutions.

This sympathy has not found expression in the newspapers, but it has been heard with surprising frequency in the home, on the street and in other public places. "Glad he got away," is the phrase which has been on many a tongue.

The question might be asked whether those who are now lavishing their sympathy upon Thaw and wishing him success in his latest attempt to regain his freedom have very carefully considered every aspect of the case.

Either Thaw is a lunatic or he isn't. If he is—and competent courts have repeatedly so held—then the sooner he is again placed under lock and key the better. Not one will be rash enough to say that the safety of any community is enhanced by the presence in it of a lunatic who has committed murder.

If, on the other hand, as Thaw and his friends so earnestly insist, he is sane now and always was sane up until about the time he murdered Stanford White, what has he ever done to deserve the sympathy of his fellow men?

Reared in a home of refinement and wealth, it was easily within the power of Harry Thaw, assuming that he was sane, to become an honored, respected and valued citizen of the community in which he lived. Every advantage of good training, clean environment and education was his. Every advantage of wealth was his. With this start how miserably he failed.

Those who are friendly to Thaw have sought in vain to discover one noble deed that he has ever done, one worth while thing that he has accomplished. Expelled from college because of his evil associates and general worthlessness, he spent his large income on riotous living in New York and Paris. He had no time for useful labor or for life's legitimate pleasures.

Perhaps some shrewd of sympathy might be extended to him had his love for Evelyn Nesbit been pure. But it will be recalled that he twice toured Europe with her before he married her. He knew just what she was.

Sometimes young men who have led wild lives settle down after marriage. But from the day Thaw married until the day he killed Stanford White he led an aimless, useless existence. He was a parasite on society.

In the light of these facts, all so well known, it seems strange that so many persons now should be extending sympathy to Thaw and hoping that he will regain his freedom. If he is insane he may be a worthy object of pity. But if, on the other hand, he is in his right mind, the possibility of his regaining his freedom soon should excite rather than sympathy the envy of others situated like him.

THE NEW LAW.

The last legislature decided that the question of finding employment for persons committed to the county jails throughout the state would be best solved by placing it in the hands of the sheriffs. It is a serious problem and calls to the labor of that official. However Sheriff Whipple has taken the matter up in an unusual way, so we owe them a call.

intelligent manner. Today he placed five men under jail sentences, at where the gas lights were going full work outside the jail proper. On man sentenced for a year from Beloit, is to be employed at the Fairbanks Morse factory in that city at 115 in the shade and there was no shade to speak of.

We had been seated something less than a minute when the inevitable happened. They trotted out Amaryllis, their youngest daughter who is a shark on election. This was at 8 o'clock.

Amaryllis started in with "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight" and, being loudly applauded by her parents, she followed with "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere."

At 9:30, Amaryllis pulled the first few stanzas of Hiawatha and being a champion long distance elocutionist, she finished it by 10 o'clock. Binks peeled down to his shirt in spite of the angry glances of his wife, which somehow he failed to see, and I had my collar off and my shoes under the door.

Mrs. Jones assured us that Amaryllis could not sing for an hour longer and Amaryllis did, without any coaxing, proceed right through until midnight. When the clock struck 12 she was in the middle of the Ancient Mariner and making unprecedented time. Binks had been out a half hour and hung over his chair like a damp dishrag.

We left suddenly, before the Ancient Mariner had completed his journey but could get away only by promising to return next week and hear Poe's Raven and Barbara Frechtie. We were all the weak that we had to go home in a taxi.

THE GOSPEL OF PAIN.

Few more illuminating books have been written than one recently from the pen of an Englishman, Coulson Kinnahan. It is entitled "The Man of No Sorrows."

The story is supposed to have been seen in a dream.

A new messiah had risen, and all the world rapidly accepted him.

In London he was received by the king and by vast multitudes, who set aside a feast day in his honor.

This being spoke of Jesus with reverence, but said he was mistaken in one thing and that for nineteen centuries men had persisted in his mistake—that God is not a God of sorrow and regrets, these belonging to finite nature, but that he is a God of love and joy. The new prophet came to correct this mistake and to remove from men's shoulders the burden of the cross.

The people heard gladly and accepted. They gave themselves up to an abandonment of joy. At first they were content to devote their lives to revel and feasting, but joy in a few months changed to pleasure seeking and finally to sensuality. Men and women were coarsened, and the finer beauty was lost from their faces.

At any rate, as soon as the crops are ready to be moved, the railroads won't be busy hauling Chautauqua lecturers around.

Another boost for the canned-goods industry. Kansas women have started a crusade against the big dinner on Sunday.

To make the governorship situation in New York more interesting, Colonel Mulhall ought to be mixed up in it.

If beef soars as high as is predicted, the obituary of more than one aviator will read: "Cow on the track."

Again the double standard for the sexes. Women are required to wear stockings on some bathing beaches.

Mr. Lind is probably in a position to make the assertion that carrying a message to Garcia was not so much.

Nobody will object if congress takes a vacation next winter in lieu of the one it didn't get this summer.

"A good hard look will repel mashes." Yes, a hard-looker usually does.

EXTRA! EXTRAS!

Bunk. "I got an idea," said Farmer Brown. "There's too much buncombe doin' around." You can't go here and you can't go there. And you can't go travelin' anywhere. But what some feller is on your trail. With a sure investment that cannot fail.

He tells you how you kin git rich quick. And his method, it sounds purty dog-gone slick.

He tells you how to make dollars grow. Until you will jes' be rollin' in dough.

Until you will be rollin' in dough. Then you will mine stock for a song. That's goin' to double before very long.

And he puts up such a winning spel. You feel yourself owin' an oatmeal. A place in the country and one in town. And a private yacht for a dollar down. Or else some invention he has got. That's goin' to clear up a powerful lot.

Of coin inside a year or two. It is a bonanza through and through.

Be wise, my son, and refuse to hear. And turn to the slickers your plaster.

For if his scheme meant so durned much nolt.

This feller would be runnin' it himself. Hang on to your dough for a rainy day. And make your money in the good old way.

Save up your dollars as wise folks do. And the poorhouse never will yawn for you.

Don't be Hot Weather. Don't wear fleecy-lined underwear.

Don't eat more than twenty-four buckwheat cakes at a sitting.

Don't split wood for your wife. Don't wear artics or a bearskin cap. Don't hang around cook stove all day.

Don't do any sort of work.

The Diary of a Bonehead.

The temperature registered 102 last evening when my wife suggested that it would be good time to go over and call on Mr. and Mrs. Jones. I couldn't see why that time was better than any other, but just the same we went. On the way out we stopped and picked up Mr. and Mrs. Binks, who also owned the Jones family a duty call. Last winter they invited all of us to a card

UNUSUAL HONOR FOR COUNTESS OF POWIS

Countess of Powis.

The Countess of Powis enjoys the unusual distinction of being a peeress in her own right in England. The honor is enjoyed by only a dozen or so others in that country. She and her sister, the Countess of Yarborough, are daughters of the late Lord Conyers. He held several titles that were in abeyance, and in 1903 Lady Powis and her sister brought forward claims for these before the house of lords, which decided that they were co-heiresses to the titles. The barony of Darcy de Knayth was bestowed upon Lady Powis and that of Fauconberg and Conyers on her sister.

Cadillac Leadership in Scientific Motor Car Development Is Once More Strikingly Demonstrated

A New Element of Efficiency

A New Source of Economy

A New Quality of Luxury

Each year you have looked to the Cadillac for the real and substantial progress in motor car development.

You have looked to the Cadillac for the great essentials in the practical motor car. And you have not looked in vain.

Now conceive, if you can, a Cadillac with its essential functions sharpened, accentuated and refined.

Conceive such a process of refinement culminating in an entirely new riding quality of unexampled ease.

That is precisely what has come to pass in this new car.

The principal contributing factor—the two speed direct drive axle—is described in detail elsewhere.

The Cadillac Delco electrical system of automatic cranking, lighting and ignition, the first practical system ever made and first introduced by us, has, after experience with it on 27,000 Cadillacs, been still further developed, improved and simplified and the slight attention required from the user materially reduced.

The carburetor has been improved, its efficiency and its well-known economy increased. It is hot water jacketed and electrically heated to facilitate starting in cold weather.

The rear springs are six inches long.

The body designs are new and strikingly handsome.

Front seat passengers may enter or leave the car at either side.

These and many other refinements of essential details make for a greater and a better Cadillac and serve to more firmly establish its position as America's leading motor car.

The Cadillac Company has never disappointed you in the smallest particular or in a single promise.

We promise you again, in this new car, a positive revelation in motor car luxury.

Cadillac Two-Speed Direct Drive Axle

In this new axle the Cadillac Company once more gives evidence of its leadership in motor car development and motor car progress.

The advantages of this axle do not lie in its being particularly an improvement so far as its functions as an axle are concerned, but rather in the manifold advantages attained in other directions through the medium of the axle.

In place of the single bevel pinion and single bevel driving gear common to ordinary construction, there are two bevel pinions and two bevel driving gears. This affords two different gear ratios, each driving direct from the engine to the axle without intermediate gearing.

The usual single direct gear ratios range from about 3.5 to 1 down to 4 to 1 according to the car. Any single gear ratio is necessarily what it is because a single gear ratio must be, or should be, the particular one which is best adapted for all around general use.

No one single gear ratio can possibly be just right for all speeds and for all conditions. But by using two direct gear ratios we have exactly doubled the means for promoting the economical and efficient application of power developed by the engine to the driving of the car.

In the new Cadillac axle we have, as before stated, two direct drive gear ratios. The low direct drive gear, which is 3.66 to 1, is especially adapted for city driving, where starting, stopping and slowing down are frequent and where cautious operation is necessary.

The high direct drive gear ratio, which is 2.5 to 1, is of special advantage where speeds of about 16 miles or more per hour are permissible and desirable.

The change from one gear ratio to the other is made by means of a simple, convenient electric switch.

The advantages of high direct drive gear ratio lie primarily in the fact that with it, any given speed of the engine produces an increase of about 42 per cent in the speed of the car. For example: at an engine speed of 700 revolutions per minute, with the low direct gear engaged, the car will travel approximately 21 miles per hour; while on the high direct gear it will travel approximately 30 miles per hour with no increase in engine speed.

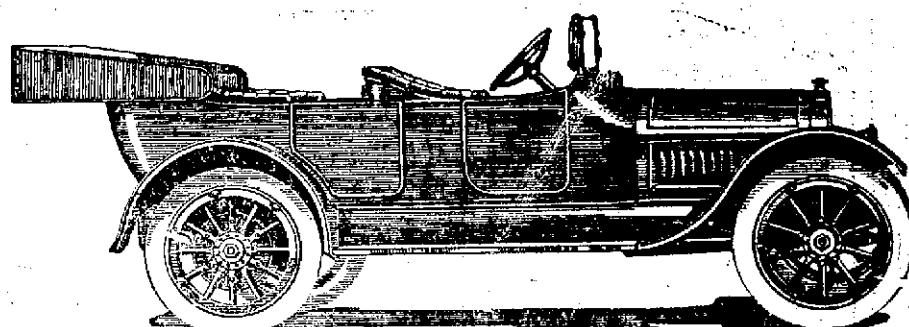

The great increase in car speed in its relation to engine speed accomplishes a number of desirable things. Among these is a decrease in gasoline consumption for a given mileage. This is due to the fact that, with the engine turning over slowly—comparatively speaking—the given quantity of gas is utilized to greater advantage and generates more actual power than with the engine turning over more rapidly. Friction also is materially reduced by reason of the parts operating more slowly, and this, too, is a factor in reducing gasoline consumption when driving on the high gear.

Another great advantage is that with this direct drive high gear ratio, there is obtained an extraordinarily luxurious smoothness in running, together with a marked quietness and a comparative freedom from the vibration which, to a greater or less extent, is ever present when traveling at high speed with a low gear ratio.

In attaining these much desired qualities, instead of adding complications to the power plant which make for greater fuel consumption and for greater upkeep expense, they have been attained by methods which are strikingly the reverse, viz., by methods which lessen the fuel consumption, methods which decrease friction with its resulting wear and methods which make for longer life, together with an appreciable decrease in the best of operation and maintenance.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

SOLVING THE SERVANT PROBLEM.
"WED like to go to housekeeping, but we can't afford it," a young married woman said to me last summer.

It sounded absurd to me at first, because I had always thought housekeeping the cheapest way of living, but that conversation opened my eyes.

For this woman said that she could not keep house and pay for rent, food, fuel, ice, light the telephone and the hundred and one little extras that will come up in the best planned household budget, for less than $7 a week. Board and lodging in a congenial private family for her husband and herself cost them $15.50 a week. Moreover if she had kept house she would have had to devote all her time to that or else have increased her budget about $10 for a maid's board and wages. In boarding, of course, she practically received the services of a maid, and in her leisure time she was easily able to do enough embroidery—a kind of work she minutely preferred to housework,—to add $5 or $6 to the family income. Therefore it would have cost those two people at least $8.50 more a week to keep house than to board.

These figures, as I say, sounded unthinkable to me at first, but figures which I have since received from other people have backed them up pretty consistently.

Now I have always said that I thought young people were infinitely happier when they went to housekeeping in a home of their own instead of boarding. But this puts a new light on the matter. Isn't it a startling situation when you think of it? That and the servant situation together, combine to give me courage to outline a plan which I have long favored, and which I am told has been tried in some parts of this country, —and that is, the cooperative kitchen.

Since it is necessary that some men must have millions of dollars while the rank and file earn scarcely enough to bring up a medium sized family, we must do something. That is costs less to board than to keep house proves that co-operation will help great deal. Well, then, why couldn't any dozen families or so have a co-operative kitchen? The meals could be served to separate families in a separate dining room or delivered at the most convenient time.

Being relieved of the burden of meal getting, almost any woman could easily dispense with a maid, take care of her own house, do her own sewing and possibly some congenial outside work.

I know most of my readers are saying that this is all nonsense and impossible, that boarding house food is unhealthy, etc. and so on. But I am not talking about a boarding house run for profit, mind you; I am talking about a co-operative kitchen run to please its owners.

Perhaps it may be visionary, but I'd certainly like to see it made less so by being put to the test. Myself, I'd be more than glad to be one of the pioneers.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1) I am a girl thirteen years old; am I too young to go with boys?

(2) Is it anything to wave at a boy?

(3) Are red shoes going to be stylish this winter?

(4) If you go to a party and play a game that has kissing in it, would you kiss the boy you had to?

(5) Is it anything for boy to bring you home from church at night?

(6) If you go out on the boat with a boy, are they boating into another one, is it anything to grab the boy, if you think him real well?

BEAUTIFUL DOLL.

(1) You are, my dear.

(2) Nothing but friendliness. I should say.

(3) Red shoes are never in style. They are sometimes worn to match a costume.

(4) I don't think I would.

(5) Just courtesy on the boy's part.

(6) If I was on a boat that ran into another boat I think I would feel it perfectly natural to grab anything handy.

TWINS.

My Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl of fifteen, large for my age.

(1) Am I too young to go with the boys?

(2) How can I remove moles without harming the skin?

(3) How can I have pink cheeks and red lips?

(4) In applying buttermilk for freckles, how should it be used? Will it harm the skin, and how long will it take before the freckles disappear?

(5) How can I whiten my arms and hands?

(6) You may be large for your age, "Dot," but you are still too young to think of beans.

(7) The only safe way is to have a surgeon do it.

(8) By being healthy, playing outdoors and getting enough sleep.

(9) Let the buttermilk stay on over night, then wash off. It will whiten a real man when you see him.

SAVING WORK IN THE HOME.

While we know the kitchen is the mainstay of the home and never was so much attention given to it as at the present day we also know that we have other rooms in the house which require our attention.

It has been estimated by Dr.

Wiley that if we live to be sixty years old, twenty years are spent sleeping, five years at the table dining and twenty years in the preparation of this food. If this statement is true, how well we should plan for health and comfort in the dining room and sleeping rooms.

With only fifteen years spent for outside pleasure and work in a woman's life, how very important it is that any little help which comes her way, bettering or adding to the health of the family who spends so much of its life dining and sleeping, is rightfully hers and every housekeeper who has a good idea along this line should join the "pass-it-along" club.

Underneath the dining table should always be found a small hassock or footstool for the mother or the child whose feet just won't fit the floor. Children are often very restless at the table for just this reason, and mother is wonderfully rested by bringing her feet from the floor where there is less strain and less rush of blood to them.

Paper table cloths or doilies should be used at least for breakfast and luncheon. These are beautifully printed like the weaves in linen and with reasonable care may be used as long and then have the great advantage of going to the waste basket instead of the wash and ironing board.

The average dining room should go through a process of elimination rather than accumulation. In these days when we hear and know so much of sanitation, we are not deliberately setting things around on plate rails and sideboards to catch dust. There must be a reasonable amount of service for every-day use, but most of it should be under cover back of pretty plain or leaded glass doors.

Out Comes Plate Rail.

If a cup or dish stands on a plate rail or on a sideboard it must be wiped whenever used. Why make ourselves the extra work? Well do I remember the day when I had the courage to ask my landlord if he would remove the plate rail from my dining room. I know I went down in his estimation, but I went up in my own when I saw every day the work was being saved dusting plates which had one ever looked at, and we had been led to believe they were ornamental.

The dining room should be cool in summer and comfortably warm in the winter and well ventilated all the year round. It should be closed at night but opened the first thing in the morning, winter or summer, for ventilation, then if in winter, closed and by the time the family is ready for breakfast it comes to a room with pure air which is much more easily heated than if the air is impure. In the summer when the dining room is white and cleaned crumbs brushed up and it is dusted after breakfast, the windows should be closed and blinds drawn, then opened when ready for luncheon or dinner.

CONCEPTION OF GOD MUST BE ELEVATED

PEOPLE NEED TO BE REMINDED OF HIS OMNIPOTENCE AND HIS HUMANITY.

INFLUENCE ON LIFE

Dependent Upon Whether Conception
Is Elevated or Abased—Theme Of The Rev. Hoffmeister.

"Our whole life is colored by our conception of God," said the Rev. E. O. Hoffmeister, pastor of the English Lutheran church, in opening his sermon yesterday morning.

"It is the day when we must have our conception of God elevated, to know him in all his glory and grandeur as well as in love and humanity if we are to preserve proper humility and live on the highest plane of devotion and service."

The Rev. Hoffmeister took for his text from Isaiah, fifty-seventh chapter fifteen verse:

"For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble and to revive the heart of the contrite ones."

"The people addressed by the prophet were those who claimed to worship the one true God. They conceived of Him as inhabiting the land which God had given them and when carried to Babylon, they believed they had been taken away from Him. Their conception of God was imperfect; consequently their lives were correspondingly imperfect, and the prophet Isaiah strove to elevate their conception of God from that of a local deity to one having all eternity as His abode."

"How is it possible for man with his feeble intellect to comprehend God? It must come through the study of His works and meditation upon them. Not will this comprehension be revealed to us in a moment, but little by little and fragment by fragment, will our conception of Him be unfolded in ever increasing grandeur."

"Have you ever remembered how a child's conception of the world and the universe develops? First the cradle is his world; then it expands to the room, the garden, until finally the child takes note of the stars and wonderingly inquires of his mother what lies beyond them. Happy is the child who at this time is told that beyond them is heaven, an eternity of space and time, where God is holding sway as well as in the limited conception of earth."

"Study of the stars, the solar system, the universe, brings to us an overwhelming idea of spaciousness; distances beyond our comprehension, all of which makes the earth and its inhabitants appear indescribably small and insignificant. Face to face with the wonders of God's creation and with but a measure of comprehension we are humbled and abashed."

"But the greatness and goodness of God is made manifest not only in the greatness but in the little things of his creation, in the eye that reflects within its tiny compass the stars in the firmament although separated by infinite distance. The tiny member although gathering to itself concentrated rays that would make the hardest metal glow and melt remains unharmed, for it is so constructed that light enters but heat is excluded."

"There are two ideas which the prophet is trying to convey: the idea of the littleness and majesty of God, and the realization of His nearness. His omnipresence, the God that dwells with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the spirit of the contrite ones."

"We need to comprehend both of these attributes. The first would cast down in mute despair; the other elevates us, gives us strength and courage to seek his presence and fight life's battle bravely. We should know God not only as Creator but as Redeemer, sense His love as well as His awful majesty. These thoughts should inspire us to faithful and devoted service, to worship and to reverence. With his help we can overcome the enemies in our own flesh and in the world without, and in His name achieve victory."

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE COOK STOVE.

By Howard L. Rann.

THE cook stove is a horrible example of man's inhumanity to woman. Sometimes when placed in the hands of a young bride who learned everything at college except how to hash brown potatoes, it becomes an object lesson of man's inhumanity to man.

The world is full of oblivious husbands who married some prize winner in the Latin course and woke up later to find that while she could pin the shoulders of a Greek root to the mat three times out of five she didn't know whether a cook stove could be started from the embers.

In a newly established home which is filled with love and installment furniture the cook stove is used for the first few years as a domestic science experiment station. As nearly all cook stoves are made of sheet iron, they do not feel their experiments so much as the rest of the family. If there were more sheet-iron stomachs in existence, there would be fewer round trip tickets sold to Reno, Nevada, with six-months' stand-over.

The cook stove is a simple affair, and seldom requires any more care than a six-cylinder automobile. It is so constructed that anyone can start fire in it the first time by the simple expedient of substituting gasoline for kerosene. As a rule, the cook stove must be fired up every morning and this is a wifely duty which should be included in the wife's ritual which should be included in the marriage ritual along with love, cherish and obey. Failure to attend to this, on the part of an apathetic and shortsighted bridegroom often results in the mournful spectacle of embittered bubbles leaving a warm bed at an unearthly hour and groping around in a sepulchral woodshed after kindling in their jammies.

One of the principal functions of the cook stove is to heat water for the bath room, it discharges this function with great enthusiasm for the members of the family who gets to the bath tub first, after which it yields an icy product that would build children on an Antarctic explorer.

In summer the cook stove does not heat water or anything else, which accounts for the increasing popularity of the bathing beach and the four-minute sponge oil.

Misses Wilma Soverhill and Norma Ryan Host at Party for Miss Roberts Saturday Afternoon.

Miss Ethel Roberts, who is soon to become a bride, was entertained by Misses Wilma Soverhill and Norma Ryan, Saturday afternoon at a one o'clock luncheon at the Soverhill home on North Washington street. The decorations were many and elaborate, wending bells and flowers being in great abundance.

When seated at the table the guests were surprised to see a miniature lake center with fairylite boats floating on the water in a realistic manner. The room decorations were very beautiful with lavender ribbons entwining the tables and each guest was presented with a bouquet of pansies. The luncheon consisted of four courses and was most elaborate.

After the luncheon a mock wedding was held to give Miss Roberts an idea what was going to take place early in September.

Margaret Allen acted as the bride and performed the part in a commanding manner. Marlon Wehrick dressed in an evening suit, served for the groom and created great amusement by her quiet and dignified actions during the ceremony. Miss Vera Nolan read the wedding vows. Margery Donnett, was the maid of honor and Ladd Sorenson acted as best man. When the officiating minister was ready for the ring, Miss Ruth Humphrey brought the seal of bondage and Miss Johanna Hayes served as flower girl. Many beautiful gifts were presented to Miss Roberts.

"I thought you would be," drawled Percy Darrow slowly. "If you hadn't decided to be, I'd have had another man put in your place. Hadn't thought of that, either, had you?"

"No, sir," replied Simmons.

"Well, I prefer you. It's no job for a quitter, and I believe you'll stick."

"I'll stick," repeated Simmons.

"Well, to work," said Darrow, lighting the cigarette he had been playing with. "Send this out, and see if you can reach Monsieur X."

"M," he dictated slowly. "Do you get this? Repeat that until you get a reply."

Without comment the operator turned to his key. The long ripping crashes of the wireless sender followed the movements of his fingers.

"I get his 'I—I,'" he said, after a moment. "It's almighty faint."

"McCarthy has disappeared. Can no longer reach him with your messages."

"He merely answers 'I—I' observed the operator.

"By the way," asked Darrow, "what is your shift, anyhow? Weren't you on at night when this thing began?"

"I'm still on at night; but Mr. McCarthy sent me a message, and asked me to stay on all this morning as a personal favor to him."

"I see. Then you're still on at night?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, tell Monsieur X that fact, put yourself at his disposal, and tell him he'd better get all his messages to you rather than to the other operators here."

"All right."

"There's your story," said Darrow to Hallowell; "it's in those messages. The scientific aspect will probably be done by somebody for the evening papers. You better concentrate on Monsieur X's connection with McCarthy."

"Say, my friend," said Hallowell earnestly, "do you think I'm a reporter for the Scientific American or a newspaper?"

All three rose. The operator was busily crashing away at his Leyden jars.

"What next?" asked Jack.

"That depends on two things."

"Whether or not McCarthy takes the Celtic," interposed Hallowell quickly.

"And whether Monsieur X will be satisfied with his mere disappearance, if he does not take the Celtic," supplemented Darrow. "In any case, we've got to find him. He's unbalanced; he possesses an immense and disconcerting and dangerous power; he is becoming possessed of a manie des grandeurs. You remember the phrasing of his last message? 'I am your lord and master, and my wrath shall be visited on you. Begone!' That is the language of exaltation. Exaltation is not far short of irresponsible raving."

"What possible clue—" began Jack Warford, blankly.

"When a man is somewhere out in the ether there is no clue," replied Darrow.

"Then how on earth can you hope to find him?"

"By the exercise of pure reason," said Darrow calmly.

CHAPTER XIII.

Darrow's Challenge.

With final warning to Simmons as to the dissemination of any information without consulting him, Darrow left the room. Hallowell listened to this advice with unmixed satisfaction; the afternoon papers would not be able to get at his source of information. The reporter felt a slight wonder as to how Darrow had managed his ascendancy over the operator. An inquiry as to that met with a shake of the head.

"I may have to ask your help in that later," was his only reply.

At the corner, after pushing through a curious crowd, the man separated.

Hallowell started for the wharf; Jack Warford for home—at Darrow's request. The scientist returned to his own apartments, where he locked himself in and sat for five hours cross-legged on a divan, staring straight ahead of him, doing nothing. At the end of that time he cautiously stretched his legs, sighed, rose, and looked into the mirror.

"I guess you're hungry," he remarked to the image therein.

It was now near mid-afternoon. Percy Darrow wandered out, ate a leisurely meal at the nearest restaurant, and sauntered up the avenue. He paused at a news stand to buy an afternoon paper, glanced at the headlines and a portion of the text, and smiled sweetly to himself. Then he betook himself by means of a bus to the Warford residence.

"I see. Then you're still on at night?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, tell Monsieur X that fact, put yourself at his disposal, and tell him he'd better get all his messages to you rather than to the other operators here."

"All right."

"I may have to ask your help in that later," was his only reply.

At the corner, after pushing through a curious crowd, the man separated.

Here Are the Exclusive Points of Your Story.

for hypothesis," Eldridge stated at last, "I follow your other essential statements. The man is unbalanced because he chooses such a method of accomplishing a simple end."

"Quite so."

"His power is limited because it has been applied to but one manifestation of etheric vibration at a time; and each manifestation has had a defined duration."

Darrow bowed. "You are the only original think-tank," he quoted Hallowell's earlier remark.

"You are most kind to place me in possession of these additional facts," said Eldridge, resuming his glasses, for naturally my conclusions, based on incomplete premises, could hardly be considered more than tentative. The happy accident of an acquaintance with the existence of these wireless messages and this personal enmity gave you a manifest but artificial advantage in the construction of your hypothesis."

"Did I not see you in the corridor of the Atlas Building the day of the first electrical failure?" asked Darrow.

"Certainly."

"Then you had just as much to go on as I did," drawled Darrow, half closing his eyes. The long dark lashes fell across his cheek, investing him in his most harmless and effeminate look.

"I fail to—"

"Yes, you fail, all right," interrupted Darrow. "You had all the strings in your hands, but you were a mile behind me in the solution of this mystery. I'll tell you why: it was for the same reason that you're going to fail a second time, now that once again I've put all the strings in your hands."

"I must confess I fail to gather your meaning," said Professor Eldridge coldly.

"It was for the same reason that always until his death you were inferior to dear old Doctor Schermerhorn as a scientist. You are an almost perfect thinking machine."

Darrow quite deliberately lighted a cigarette, flipped the match into the grate, and leaned back luxuriously. Professor Eldridge sat bolt upright, waiting. Helen Warford watched them both.

"You have no humanity; you have no imagination," stated Darrow at last. "You follow the dictates of rigid science, and of logic."

"Most certainly," Eldridge agreed to this, as to a compliment.

"It takes you far," continued Darrow, "but not far enough. You observe only facts; I also observe men. You will follow only where your facts lead; I am willing to take a leap in the dark. I'll have all this matter hunted out while you are proving your first steps."

"That, I understand it, is challenge," demand Eldridge, touched in his pride of the scientific diagnostician.

"That," said Percy Darrow blandly, "is a statement of fact."

"We shall see."

"Sure!" agreed Darrow. "Now, the thing to do is to find Monsieur X. I don't know whether your curiously scutellate mind has arrived at the point where it is willing to admit the existence of Monsieur X or not; but it will. The man who finds Monsieur X wins. Now, you know or can read in the morning paper every fact I have. Go to it!"

"You're Going to Fall a Second Time."

Eldridge bowed formally.

"There's one other thing," went on Darrow in a more serious tone of voice. "You have, of course, considered the logical result of this power carried to its ultimate possibility."

"Certainly," replied Eldridge coldly.

"The question is superfluous."

"It is a conclusion which many scientific minds will come to, but which will escape the general public unless the 'surmise' is published. For the present I suggest that we use our influence to keep it out of the prints."

Eldridge reflected. "You are quite right," said he; and rose to go.

After his departure Helen turned on Darrow.

"You were positively insulting!" she cried, "and in my house! How could you?"

"Helen," said Darrow, facing her fondly, "I maintained rigidly all the outer forms of politeness. That is as far as I will go anywhere with that man. My statement to him is quite just; he has no humanity."

"What do you mean? Why are you so bitter?" asked Helen, a little subdued in her anger by the young man's evident earnestness.

"You never knew Doctor Schermerhorn, did you, Helen?" he asked.

"The funny little old German?"

"Indeed, I did! He was a dear!"

"He was one of the greatest scientists living—and he was a dear! That goes far to explain him—a gentle, wise, child-like, old man—with imagination and a Heaven-seeking soul. He picked me up as a boy, and was a father to me. I was his scientific assistant until he was killed, murdered by the foulest band of pirates. Life passes; and that is long ago."

He fell silent a moment; and the girl looked on this unprecedented betrayal of feeling with eyes at once startled and sympathetic.

"Doctor Schermerhorn," went on Darrow in his usual faintly tired, faintly cynical tone, "worked off and on for five years on a certain purely scientific discovery, the nature of which you would not understand. In conversation he told its essentials to this Eldridge. Doctor Schermerhorn fell sick of a passing illness. When he had recovered, the discovery had been completed and given to the scientific world."

"Oh!" cried Helen. "What a trick!"

"So I think. The discovery was purely theoretic and brought no particular fame or money to Eldridge. It was, as he looked at it, and as the doctor himself looked at it, merely carrying common knowledge to a conclusion. Perhaps it was; but I never forgave Eldridge for depriving the old man of the little satisfaction of the final proof. It is indicative of the whole man. He lacks humanity, and therefore imagination."

"Still, I wish you wouldn't be quite so bitter when I'm around," pleaded Helen, "though I love your feeling for dear old Doctor Schermerhorn."

"I wish you could arrange to get out of town for a little while," urged Darrow. "Isn't there some one you can visit?"

"Do you mean there is danger?"

"There is the potentiality of danger," Darrow amended. "I am almost confident, if pure reason can be relied on, that when the time comes I can avert the danger."

"Almost—" said Helen.

Dinner Stories

Dinner stories. Enraptured, they gazed, hand in hand, upon the beautiful scene stretched before them in the setting sun. Twas the lake district, and they but three days upon their honey-moon.

"Dearest," he said, gazing at her fondly, "isn't this heavenly?"

"Yes, Reginald," she softly murmured.

"Do you know," he whispered ardently, "to me life does not seem long enough for our happiness. Just think, even if we were fortunate, our married life can hardly last longer than fifty years."

"Is that all?" she queried, wonderingly edging nearer.

"Yes, that's so," a touch of sadness in his voice. "Only fifty years in which to love each other."

"Then kiss me quick, Reginald," she exclaimed, "we're wasting time."

The patter of tiny feet was heard from the steps of the stairs. Mrs. Kintyre raised her head, warning the others to silence.

"Push!" she said softly. "The children are going to deliver their good-night message. It always gives me a feeling of reverence to hear them—they are so much nearer the Creator than we are and they speak the love that is in their little hearts never so fully as when the dark has come. Listen!"

Then there was a moment of tense silence. Then—

"Mamma," came the message in a shrill whisper, "Willie found a bed-bug!"
